THE LONG-AWAITED VISIT

Leaving behind the golden coast and turquoise waters, on the way to the elevated peaks, lies a different face of this destination presenting the only forest in the region where the varied sceneries invoke a sense of boundless exploration.

Encompassing more than 50,000 acres of protected natural areas, the Sierra de la Laguna, provides several trails -safe and available- to connect to the water reserves, the designated entrances to these trails have a controlled access through the family ranches established in the area.

Inspiring and leisurely strolls through the Cañón de la Zorra, San Dionisio, Sol de Mayo, La Victoria, San Simón and el Cañón de la Burrera among others, display the stunning geography of the region designed by nature in its most perfect form.

The majestic Baja outback invites to enjoy the sense of liveness that comes out with the discovery and the exploration, especially in such an alluring adventure accessible only in one season of the year and happens right after the arrival of the most special guest, the rain. Pleasant jaunts and deep plunges await as the chill of the winter commence.
